

Our approach to Twitter

If you're following us, here's what to expect:

- Between 1-10 tweets a day (excluding replies), depending on how much we've got going on in the Centre
- Information from Barbican teams about what they're doing and artist updates
- Twitter interviews with artists and Q&As
- Last minute announcements, promotions, competitions and ticket offers
- Occasional live coverage of events
- Alerts about new content on our other digital channels
- General chat and debate

Availability

We mostly update and monitor our Twitter account during office hours, Monday to Friday, 10am – 6pm. Twitter may occasionally be unavailable and we accept no responsibility for lack of service due to Twitter downtime.

Direct Messages and @Replies

However much we'd love to, we are not able to reply individually to all the messages we receive via Twitter. We welcome feedback and ideas from all our followers, and join the conversation where possible. A retweet or being followed by us does not imply endorsement.

We will try to read all @replies and Direct Messages and ensure that any questions or helpful suggestions are passed to the relevant people in the Barbican.

The best way to contact us for urgent enquiries can be found in the Contact Us section of our website.

Official Twitter channels

@BarbicanCentre

The Barbican's main Twitter account with event information, updates and reviews.

@BarbicanVenues

Learn more from our Business Events team on venue hire and choosing the Barbican as your venue for events, conferences, receptions and weddings.

@BarbicanTrust

Follow our charitable arm, Barbican Centre Trust, for news about support for our arts and creative learning programmes with tweets from our Development team and Trust Chairman, Emma Kane.